GLOSSARY

ANGOSTURA BITTERS – The salt and pepper for bartenders. A bitter and strong spirit that's usually used in small amounts in cocktails, to raise other flavors and bring depth. From Trinidad & Tobago.

ANGOSTURA ORANGE BITTERS – Just like its big brother Angostura Bitters, its used in cocktails to raise other flavors and bring depth. But instead of bitter and strong its more as the name says a more citrus driven acidity, but still strong and bitter.

FALERNUM - A sweet syrup or liqueur used in Caribbean and tropical drinks. It contains flavors of almond, ginger, lime, sometimes vanilla, cloves, and allspice.

CLARIFIED – A so called “milk – Washing” An old method that can massively enhance the quality of a cocktail and make the flavors rounder. The acidity of the cocktail helps the milk form curdles to act as a filter for the cocktail to pour through STIFF – A so called “Stiff cocktail’ refers to a drink that has a high alcohol content, making it quite potent. These cocktails are typically made with a large proportion of spirits compared to mixers, resulting in a stronger taste and a more intense effect. A few examples of stiff cocktails are the Negroni, Old Fashioned and Dry martini.
